

The New York Times

Wednesday, October 24, 2007 Last Update: 10:17 AM ET

Food Stuff

By FLORENCE FABRICANT
Published: October 23, 2007

From Toronto to Manhattan: A Canadian Cookie Arrives

Over the years, friends have indulged me with boxes of excellent pastries and confections made by Dufflet of Toronto. I also found them in shops in other Canadian cities. Recently, a package of Dufflet bittersweet chocolate crackle beckoned from the shelves at Eli's Manhattan.

SIGN IN TO E-MAIL OR SAVE THIS

PRINT

REPRINTS

SHARE

ARTICLE TOOLS
SPONSORED BY

AN AMERICAN EMPIRICAL PICTURE BY WES ANDERSON

On the company's Web site, dufflet.com, the crackle is aptly described as being based on the classic Florentine cookie. In addition to the bittersweet with toasted almonds, there are two other flavors: bittersweet with maple and cashews, and milk chocolate with toasted hazelnuts. They are all best kept under lock and key.

At Eli's a five-ounce package is $12.99. The company will not ship online orders to the United States.

DUFFLET™ SMALL INDULGENCES
PURE & SWEET

BITTERSWEET CHOCOLATE CRACKLE

toasted almonds

nothing artificial, always delightful

DUFFLET™ SMALL INDULGENCES
PURE & SWEET

BITTERSWEET CHOCOLATE CRACKLE

maple cashew

nothing artificial, always delightful

DUFFLET™ SMALL INDULGENCES
PURE & SWEET

MILK CHOCOLATE CRACKLE

hazelnut maple cashew

nothing artificial, always delightful

<http://www.nytimes.com/>

10/24/2007

www.dufflet.com october 2007